

BROWN HAS NO MANDATE TO GOVERN

Dear Mr Jackman,

The last letters' page of 2007 was a damning indictment of the current Labour Government. Elected on a clear manifesto commitment to grant us a referendum on the EU Constitution, Gordon Brown reneged on that promise just as he has on the arbitration deal for (proper) police pay in England. Mass unlimited immigration is affecting employment opportunities and creating unsustainable demand for housing ,transport, education, health and social services. Crime, much by immigrants has risen to such an extent that there are not enough prison places and the Government are giving our hard earned taxes as rewards to failed asylum seekers returning home to set up businesses .Local traders are now so poor that they cannot even afford a contribution to Christmas lights , pensioners will have to travel far for a Post Office that hasn't been closed because of the EU and everybody will struggle to get their Christmas waste collected by the reduced service ,halved due to EU landfill directives..Meanwhile Labour's Ken Livingstone plans to tackle the as yet unproven global warming by further constraints on business whilst ignoring the simple truth that if we wish to reduce traffic congestion and carbon footprints we should limit population growth. It was however reassuring to learn that our solitary Labour MEP, Richard Howlett is busying himself promoting the EU's self important plans to introduce safer burning cigarettes, despite the fact that people have very little freedom left to smoke them.

Gordon Brown has no mandate to govern as he has done and it is outrageous that members of his cabinet have been sustained by admitted wrongful loans and donations that break electoral law. If he had any concept of morality he would call an election, soon.

Yours sincerely,

Michael McGough
